HISTORICAL OUTLINE.

In November, 1853, a small group of Wisconsin fruit growers met in Whitewater and organized the Wisconsin Fruit Growers Association. According to the scant records available this association flourished until the beginning of the Civil war.

September 29th, 1865, a similar group which had been in attendance at the state fair held in Janesville met and organized the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society. The first officers were: President, B. F. Hopkins; vice presidents, one in each county named; secretary J. C. Plumb; treasurer, F. C. Curtis; executive committee, Geo. J. Kellogg and L. P. Chandler.

For several years annual meetings were held at the same time and place as the meetings of the Agricultural Society and the proceedings printed in one volume.

In 1871 the society was granted a charter by the legislature and provision made for the publication of the reports of the society in a separate volume. From that time to the present the society has been a ward of the state, receiving state aid in return for which it has rendered a distinct service through the collection and dissemination of information on fruits, flowers and vegetables.

The society during its early years confined its efforts largely to the testing and selection of varieties suitable to our climate, an extremely important and valuable work.

MAN 27-1919

The activities of the society have broadened from decade to decade through its more than half century of existence until it is now recognized as an important factor in the state's progress and as one of the most progressive and active organizations of the kind in the United States.

In 1898 the society established at Wausau a so-called "trial" orchard or station for the purpose of determining what varieties of tree fruits were best adapted to the then recently cut over lands of central Wisconsin. So successful was this work and so great the demand that during the following 12 years twelve other trial orchards were established, all proving of great value.

In 1904 the society departed from the plan followed by practically all horticultural societies of paying the secretary merely a nominal salary for nominal services and provided funds for a full time secretary and a central, permanent office. Probably no other step has exerted greater influence on the society than this.

From 1896 to 1901 the society published a monthly journal, The Wisconsin Horticulturist. The records fail to show why it was discontinued.

From 1906 to 1910 Bulletins were published at irregular intervals, nineteen in all, of quarto size ranging from 8 to 32 pages.

September, 1910, marked the birth of Wisconsin Horticulture a 16 page monthly journal sent to members and exchanges only. The membership fees and advertising cover the expense of publication, leaving a handsome margin of profit.

Early records show that the society was active in promoting horticultural exhibits at the state fair and it appears that close relations existed between the society and the fair management until the early eighties when a break occurred. Beginning with the 1904 state fair and to the present the society has again taken an active part in these exhibitions, expending in one year as high as one thousand dollars of its funds for an exhibit of fruit.

Relations with the Horticultural Department of the Agricultural College have been strengthened and the society and the department now work in perfect harmony.

In this brief outline much has necessarily been omitted; no mention has been made of the spirit, the soul, of the organization. A perusal of the reports of the society leaves the impression that the courage and tenacity of purpose of that little group of sturdy pioneers who met in Whitewater in 1853 has been transmitted to their followers and has been our guiding spirit until the present day. As out of the oaken glades, rich bottom lands and rolling clay terranes of our state there has been developed one of the richest agricultural domains in the world, so have the men and women who have had the love of fruit and flowers in their hearts kept pace through a half century and more with the progress of events and have held fast to the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society.

Frederic Cranefield, Secretary.

Madison, Wis., January 15th, 1919.
